

Jennifer Hill,
Quality Strategy and Administration Manager,
Nissan North America

Jennifer Hill's path to her current field started early with her love for science and math. She credits her dad for aiding in the development of her mechanical aptitude and desire to be a professional problem solver.

Hill's track record of success is clear: She's developed teams and initiatives improving Nissan's product quality by 200 percent, and led two synergy teams within Nissan serving over 1,000 employees. Having recently transitioned from Process Engineering to Quality Strategy and Administration, her team strategizes about improving the customer's experience and providing direction for delivering top quality products to Global Customers.

The former Titan Cheerleader's accomplishments include Nashville Business Journal 40 under 40 Award Recipient, Murfreesboro Young Professional, Young Professional Athena Nominee, Nissan North America Quality of Management Ambassador Award, Leukemia and Lymphoma Society Women of the Year Candidate and Tennessee Titans Pro-bowl Cheerleader. In addition, Hill is co-founder of a new startup, TransportEd. An organization aimed at immersing students in real world STEM experiences from transportation industry professionals and educators.

Hill's philosophy for success in life can be found in the words of Maya Angelou "Success is liking yourself, liking what you do, and liking how you do it."
